Eureka Weather:

Dry and warmer weather will prevail across the interior through the week. Coastal areas will continue to see night and morning low clouds with partial afternoon clearing.

Medford Weather:

The forecast is still on track from more warming as a ridge builds into the Eastern Pacific. A weak short wave disturbance will move down the northwest flow this afternoon with an area of instability along the cascades down to around Crater Lake. Confidence is only fair to moderate only for thunderstorms across southern Oregon cascades and there may instead be towering cumulus over the area. Modoc County will see isolated thunderstorms this afternoon and early evening. High temperature in the Rogue Valley on Thursday will be near 90 and lower 90s now look likely for Friday and Saturday as the ridge moves overhead. The ridge is expected to shift into eastern Oregon as early as Friday afternoon.

Reno Weather:

Low pressure will gradually move east out of the region through Thursday with decreasing shower chances followed by warmer temperatures going into the weekend. A trough will bring breezy conditions Sunday and Monday with a gradual cooling trend. There is a chance of thunderstorms late Sunday into Monday.

San Francisco Weather:

A modest warming trend is expected to begin today persisting through Saturday, most apparent inland as high pressure builds along the coast. Another cooling trend will start on Sunday and continue into early next week as a weak Pacific low approaches the coast. Mostly dry conditions will continue into early next week.

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY:

Sacramento Weather:

Gradually warmer temperatures through the end of the week. Daytime highs 10 to 15 degrees above normal by Friday. A slight threat of afternoon showers or thunderstorms over the Sierra today. SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

The onshore flow will bring a night to morning marine clouds to the coast and some valleys with temperatures warming to above normal into the weekend. Then a low pressure system will approach on Sunday and will increase cloudiness and cool the temperatures to below normal for next week.

Extreme Southwestern California including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

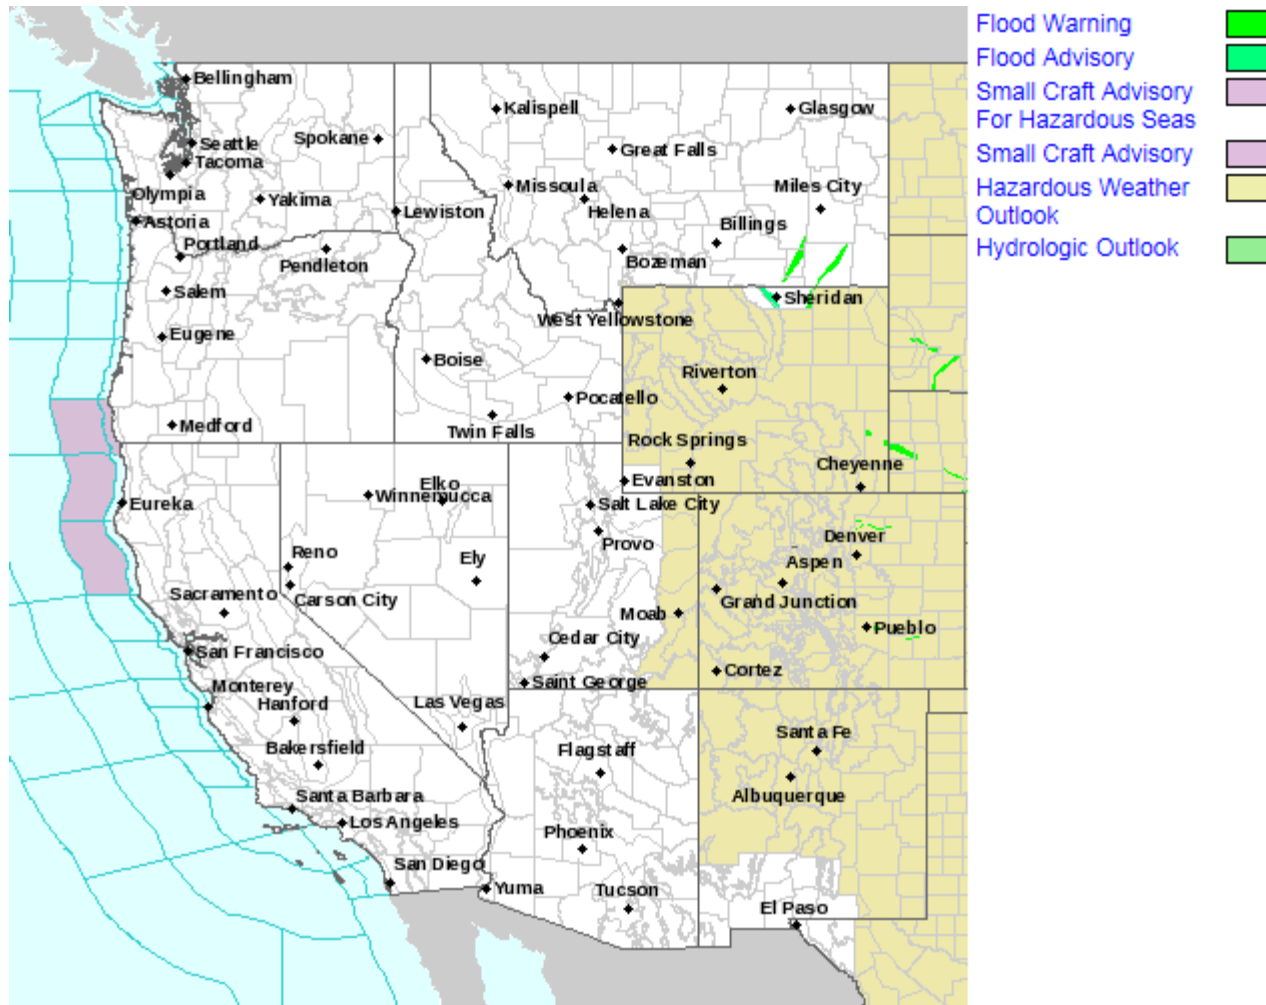

Seasonal weather will continue for the next week with weak onshore flow and a persistent marine layer. High pressure will bring an inland warming trend through Saturday. A moderately deep marine layer will become somewhat shallower for Friday through the weekend. For Sunday through early next week, a trough of low pressure will move inland along the west coast. This will bring an inland cooling trend along with deepening of the marine layer.

Southeast California Weather:
